

Abstract

A boat ignition safety apparatus and method are disclosed. A vapor sensor can detect an amount of vapor fumes within an associated compartment and a blower associated with the compartment is operative to exhaust gas therefrom. A controller controls the blower based on the amount of vapor fumes within the associated compartment, which further can include operation for a period of time even after the ignition has been turned off.

5